  - The war has driven increases in European defence budgets, strengthening partnerships like NATO, shifting the global balance of power.
  - Turkey doesn't fully align with all NATO proposals, particularly on economic sanctions.
- Strained Global Institutions: The war has exposed limitations of international institutions like the UN to prevent major conflicts. Countries may question the effectiveness of these bodies, potentially leading to a shift in how international disputes are addressed.
- Massive Displacement: The UN estimates over 11 million Ukrainians have fled their homes, creating a significant refugee crisis in Europe and internally displaced populations within Ukraine. This has placed immense strain on neighbouring countries and international aid organisations.
  - UNICEF reports that two-thirds of Ukrainian children have been negatively impacted by the war, facing displacement, psychological trauma, and disruptions to education.
- Threatened Food Security: Ukraine is a major agricultural producer, supplying a significant portion of the world's wheat, corn, and sunflower oil. The war has disrupted planting, harvesting, and exports exacerbating existing food insecurity issues and potentially leading to shortages in vulnerable regions.
