Expensive Elections

Election expenditure by parties in 2024 has nearly doubled since the previous Lok Sabha election

Cost of each vote (expenditure on elections/number of voters)

Status of Election Expenditure in Other Democracies

- United States: In the US, election financing is predominantly derived from limited contributions made by individuals, corporations, and Political Action Committees (PACs).
 - US Supreme Court rulings have facilitated the emergence of Super PACs, which can spend unlimited amounts on political campaigning.
- United Kingdom: Political parties face specific expenditure limits when contesting elections.
 - Each party is permitted to spend £54,010 for each constituency they contest, leading to an overall cap of £35 million for parties contesting all constituencies.
 - During the long campaign phase (five months before the House of Commons term ends), candidates can spend £46,000 to £49,000 per constituency. In the short campaign period (after election announcement), spending is limited to £17,000 to £20,000 per constituency.

How is Election Expenditure Governed in India?

- Representation of the People Act (RPA), 1951:

- Section 77 of the RPA requires candidates to keep a detailed and accurate account of all expenses related to their campaign from the day they file their nomination until the election day.
- Section 78 mandates that every candidate submit their election expense account to the District Election Officer within 30 days of the result declaration.
- Companies Act, 2013: A non-government company with at least three years in operation may contribute up to 7.5% of its average net profits from the last three years to political parties registered under the RPA.
- Foreign Contribution (Regulation) Act (FCRA), 2010: Political parties, candidates, and election-related entities in India are prohibited from receiving foreign contributions.
 - This includes funds, gifts, donations, and any financial support from foreign sources.

What are Challenges Associated with Election Expenditure in India?

- Absence of Regulation: Unlike 65 countries, including the US, UK, Canada, and Brazil, India has no limits on political party expenditures during elections.
 - It leads to an uneven playing field, favouring well-funded national parties over regional and independent candidates.
- Media Advertising: National and state-level parties allocate a substantial portion of their budgets to media advertisements, surpassing expenditures for grassroots activities like rallies.
 - It can marginalise candidates without access to significant financial resources.
- Disproportionate Digital Advertising: The growing influence of digital platforms like Google and Meta (facebook) has widened the spending gap, with national parties investing significantly more in digital advertising than state parties.
 - This trend exacerbates existing inequalities and reduces the visibility of smaller parties and candidates.
- Risk of Unaccounted Money: The absence of regulation for third-party campaigners raises concerns about unaccounted money flooding the electoral process.
 - There is a heightened risk of quid pro quo arrangements where financial contributions influence political decisions without proper accountability.

What Reforms are Needed in Election Expenditure?

- Expenditure Ceilings: As per the ECI's 'Proposed Electoral Reforms' report in 2016, expenditure ceilings for political parties should be introduced in India.

- It will ensure a more equitable playing field to encourage parties to compete based on ideas rather than financial clout.
- Regulation of Third-Party Campaigners: India should implement formal registration and disclosure requirements for third-party campaigners like Australia.
- State Funding of Elections: The Indrajit Gupta Committee \(1998\) and the Law Commission report \(1999\) have recommended state funding for elections, whereby the government would partially finance the election expenditures of candidates nominated by recognised political parties.
- Ban on Government Advertisements: A ban on government advertisements during the six months leading up to elections should be enforced to reduce the advantage held by the ruling party and promote fair competition among candidates.
- Party Financial Assistance: The law must be amended to explicitly provide that 'financial assistance' by a political party to its candidate should also be within the candidate's prescribed election expenditure limits.
 - It would close loopholes that allow parties to circumvent spending regulations.
- Comprehensive Electoral Oversight: Establishing an independent electoral oversight body could enhance accountability in campaign financing.
